SYNOPSIS

Seoul, the present day. A former North Korean professional table-tennis player, middle-aged Ri Jeong-rim (Ra Mi-ran) defects to the South on a Chinese boat after her husband is arrested. She's provided with a flat by the government, whose agents spy on her, and assigned a minder, Kim Song-heui (Ju Yu-rang), who's in charge of "new residents" in the area. Feeling lonely and alienated, she goes on blind dates which lead nowhere, and still hopes her husband may be able to join her one day. After starting work at a laundry, she's befriended by Oh (Oh Seong-tae), a local policeman who's struggling to make ends meet and asks her out on dates. Ri's experiences are interwoven with the lives of Kim, who's in debt and living with her mother (Jang Yeong-jul), a raving Christian; Ji-na (Noh Seul-gil), a schoolgirl who has become pregnant and is considering suicide; and Lee Jun-hyeok (Lee Jun-hyeok), a lonely crippled man for whom she makes kimchi.
